(207) Entertainment signs one of “Maine’s Premier Entertainers”

(For Immediate Release)

South Portland, ME – March 6, 2009

This week (207) Entertainment signed one of Maine’s Premier Entertainers “Barney Martin.” Barney is said to be a man of many talents from being a dramatic/comedic actor on stage/screen, singer, musician, and entertainer. His stepmother Terry once told him many times regarding his comedy that “...by not doing comedy, you are missing your calling...!” To that Barney embraces any success to his art and quips, “Well I ain’t dead yet!”

Beginning in high school, Barney discovered his love for music and theater. After acquiring a BA in theater performance, he toured the British Isles, central France and played stages from New England to Colorado, the Bahamas, to Boston. Since the mid 70s, he’s been involved professionally as a singer/songwriter/entertainer as well as acting in theater and “on camera”. He’s been a part of several duos/trios, has opened for Livingston Taylor in concert, and performed on stage with David Wilcox. Barney has one CD to his credit. Today, he leads a heritage rock trio named “Coos Canyon” (named after his favorite boyhood swimming hole in Western Maine). They have high hopes of producing a holiday CD for the 2009 Christmas season as well as Barney has design to work on a solo project.

“On camera”, Barney has been in numerous Maine commercials - AAA Holiday Spot as an elf, Handyman Tools, Hannaford, Megabucks, and Next Gen to name just a few. His first feature role on the big screen was in the film “Liberty, Maine” starring Eric Close. His national TV credit was a role in Fox’s “Murder in Small Town X” 2001 - one of the first reality shows on TV shot in Eastport, Maine.
